DETAILED ACTION

Based upon the large number of independent claims presented in the amendment filed July 6, 2001 (Paper No. 19), an additional restriction requirement is deemed necessary, as discussed below.

Election/Restriction

Restriction to one of the following inventions is required under 35 U.S.C. 121:

- I. Claims 1, 2, 4-11, 35, 38-45, drawn to a method of altering blood flow to the vagina by administering to a female individual an odorant by inhalation, classified in class 424, subclass 434, for example.
- II. Claims 24, 26-32, and 34, drawn to a method of altering blood flow to the vagina via determining a level of sexual arousal of the female individual by manual genital manipulation, to masturbation, or both; then administering to the female individual an odorant by inhalation, classified in class 424, subclass 725, for example.
- III. Claim 25, drawn to a method of altering blood flow to the vagina of a female individual via measuring a baseline blood flow to the vagina of the female individual; then administering to the female individual an odorant by inhalation classified in class 424, subclass 758, for example.
- IV. Claim 46, drawn to a method of increasing blood flow to the vagina of a female individual via administering a floral-aldehydic perfume odorant to the female individual by inhalation, classified in class 514, subclass 929, for example.

Art Unit: 1651

- V. Claim 47, drawn to a method of decreasing blood flow to the vagina of a female individual via administering a floral-aldehydic perfume odorant to the female individual by inhalation, classified in class 514, subclass 693, for example.

The methods of Groups I-V are directed to distinct inventions which, as clearly evidenced by the claims and disclosure, do not necessarily require the same odorant be employed and/or all of the steps recited by the other Groups. For example, the method of Group I only requires a single step: the inhalation of an undefined amount of an odorant (such as the odorants recited in claim 1 - which do not include a floral aldehydic perfume odorant, but which is required of the methods of Groups IV and V) that alters vaginal blood flow by a female individual. The method of Group II requires the step of determining a level of sexual arousal of the female individual to manual genital manipulation, to masturbation, or both - which is not required of the other Groups. The method of Group III requires the step of measuring a baseline blood flow to the vagina of the female individual - which is not required of the other Groups. The method of Group IV requires that a floral aldehydic perfume odorant be inhaled and that it increase blood flow to the vagina and the method of Group V requires that a floral aldehydic perfume odorant be inhaled and that it decrease blood flow to the vagina, which are not necessarily required of Groups I-III. The methods of Groups IV and V, as clearly evidenced by the claims themselves, are independent and distinct, each from the other, since they have different modes of operation, they have different functions, and they have different (and opposite) effects. The search for each of the above inventions is not co-extensive particularly with regard to the literature search.

Applicant is advised that the response to this requirement, to be complete, must include an election of the invention to be examined even though the requirement be traversed (with respect to patentability over the art, it is suggested that the two-step method of Group II or Group III be elected).
